*A/N: will be posting more soon. ****

It had only been a few days since GLaDOS had released Chell. She had managed to stumble apon an old farmhouse. It was the morning of her second day there. **

Chell opened her eyes and sat up on the old bed as the morning sunlight flooded the room. She yawned and stretched her arms then stood up on the aged hardwood floor. She walked over to where her black and white long-fall boots were. She set her foot down into the boot then pulled the Velcro strap across her lower leg then fastened it, then the other strap. She repeated the process on her other boot too. She opened the window and let a soft summer breeze into the room. Chell let her hair down out of her ponytail. She sighed. It was peaceful and Chell loved the beauty of the outside world. She thought of Wheatley. Sure he was a moron, but she was her moron. **

if only I hadn't let g-

Her thought was interrupted by something. **

It was a voice

Then she could hear the door opening and then a woman talking. **

"C'mon Gordon," The voice said. Then there was footsteps.

Chell snuck down the stairs. **

She was behind the two people. One was a man wearing some sort of bulky orange armor, the other was a woman wearing a brown sweatshirt. She was taller than both of them. The man turned around. When he saw Chell he looked concerned, yet also surprised.

"Alyx?" He said. The woman turned to face Chell. **
